

Ayak Avakyan

The image displays a decorative border composed of two identical rectangular panels arranged vertically. Each panel features a central cross-like motif formed by a diagonal line intersecting a horizontal line. This central design is flanked by four stylized, four-petaled floral or leaf-like shapes. The entire central area is enclosed within a double-lined rectangular frame. The outermost border of each panel is defined by a decorative scroll or meander pattern. The entire design is rendered in black and white, with heavy black outlines emphasizing the geometric and organic forms.

A vertical column of ten black and white photographs showing various views of a fossilized ammonite shell. The images are arranged in two columns: the left column shows lateral views, and the right column shows dorsal and ventral views. The shell has a complex, ribbed spiral structure.

Dedicated to Queen Goddess with absolute adoring.
